ABSTRACT

Expense data is accessed for one or more expense types. An initial average expense is computed for one or more of the expense types and the computed average expenses are presented to a user. A user selection is received of an item corresponding to an expense type, and expense data for the item is entered. An updated average expense is computed for the expense type associated with the item based upon the expense data for the item.

40166826.4.doc